

Week 12 Inside Out

No, you're not.

I'm annoying.

They, well, uh, you know what?

You can't (1)_____ on what's going wrong.

There's always a way to turn things around.

To find the fun.

Yeah, find the fun.

I don't know how to do that.

Okay, well, try to think of something funny.

Um, oh, remember the (2)_____ movie where the dog dies?

Oh, yeah, that's not...

What about that time with Meg when Riley laughed so hard milk came out of her nose?

Yeah, that (3)_____.

It felt like fire.

Oh, it was...

Okay, okay, don't think of that.

Let's try something else.

Uh, what are your favorite things to do?

My favorite?

Um, well, I like it when we're outside.

That's good!

Like there's the (4)_____ and sunshine.

Oh, like that time we buried Dad in the sand up to his neck?

Oh, I was thinking more like rain.

Rain.

Rain is my favorite, too.

We can stomp around in puddles.

You know, there's cool umbrellas, lightning storms.

More like when the rain runs down our back and makes our shoes soggy.

And we get all cold, shivery, and everything just starts (5)_____ droopy.

Oh, hey, hey, hey, easy.

Why are you crying?

It's just really the opposite of what we're going for here.

Crying helps me slow down and obsess over the weight of life's problems.

Ugh.

You know what?

Let's, uh, think about something else.

How about we read some (6)_____ manuals, huh?

I've read most of them.

Well, have you read this one?

This seems interesting.

Long-Term Memory Retrieval Volume 47?

No.

Ooh, a (7)_____ page-turner.

Long-Term Memory Data Selection Via Channel Subgrouping?

See?

Fun already.

Ugh, you lucky dog.

You're reading these (8)_____ things.

I gotta go work.

Life is so unfair.

Ugh.
